

Description

The arched niche (arcosolium) for 2 burials is located in a burial chamber of the upper level of the catacombs. The tomb is decorated with mosaics, which are in a bad state of preservation. Most parts are preserved only in counterparts. The back wall, surrounded by fragments of a Latin inscription, depicts a medallion with the bust of a woman, flanked by candleholders. The reveal shows a tendril of acanthus, framed by a red band with dark gems. The mosaics are currently dated in the 5th-6th century AD. The catacombs itself were used for burials from the 2nd century AD to the Middle Ages.
